

COMIC CRAFT

Requirement Analysis Phase

The Requirement Analysis Phase identifies what is needed to create the Comic Craft project successfully. The team decides the target audience, story length, number of pages or panels, characters, language, visual style and other important requirements. The expected features and content are listed clearly so that everyone understands the project scope. This phase helps the team avoid confusion and ensures that the final comic meets the required objectives.